VIEW FROM THE HILL

God, I know nothing, my sense is all nonsense,
And fear of You begins intelligence:
Does it end there? For ... love, for food,
For books and birch trees I claim gratitude,
But when I grieve over the unripe dead
My grief festers, corrupted into dread,
And I know nothing.
Give us our daily bread.

~Donald Hall

The poet knows whereof he writes. His wife, fellow poet Jane Kenyon, died of leukemia at age 47, just fifteen months after her diagnosis.

Purveyors of common wisdom tell us that, “That which does not kill us makes us stronger.” And, “God never gives us more than we can handle.” And, “Every cloud has a silver lining.” And “Always look on the bright side of life.” But the truth is—and you know this as well as I—some times, some events are only bad. No silver lining, no making us stronger, and way more than we can handle.

There is much to be gained from the ability to shake off disappointments and make the best of awkward situations. In fact, the overall quality of our lives might be largely shaped by the degree to which we embrace either the positives or negatives of any given situation. But there is little to be gained from denying the fact that sometimes there is no immediate or even eventual upside to the events that befall us. There are times when wailing, rending our clothes, shaking our fists at the sky, taking to our beds, and asking why, why, why a thousand times are the only fitting response. (And allowing our loved ones to do the same when life deals them such a blow, to sit with them in patient, anguished silence while they do the same, without trying to make it all better, is the only loving thing to do.)

The day will come, maybe months or years later, when we are ready to see the sun on the water, or hear the laughter that was always there, when we are ready to acknowledge that we were not defeated and we did handle it. And then we will be able to give thanks that we yet live. But that day is not to be rush. That day cannot be rushed. Because life is full and complex and mysterious; a blessing we do not control.

RE NEWS

A free and responsible search for truth and meaning

Greetings and welcome back! It is that time of year when many of us have returned back to school, the weather is turning cooler and the fall colors are beginning to show. Our church school year has begun as well. This year our Religious Education focus will be on our Seven Principles and how we shall apply them in our daily lives. You might notice that we have already had some changes! New this year, we are going to have RE every week! My associate teachers and I hope to provide a rich and welcoming curriculum to everyone, young and old, who wishes to join us each Sunday during the weekly sermon after the story.

Each week our lessons will be focused on one or more of the Seven Principles and will include at least one of the following: an emphasis on spiritual growth through direct experience; stories of prophetic women and men who have helped shape humanity for the better, Judeo-Christian stories about caring for the earth and the people on her; Humanist teachings that tell us to use reason, logic and the scientific method in our explorations of mind, body and the world around us; spiritual teachings of earth centered beliefs that help us celebrate the sacredness of life and how to live meaningfully with the earth.

Our structure is changing as well. We will not have a feast (snack) at every lesson. Feasts will be on specific days, such as our 'Day of the Dead' celebration. As we move through this year our lessons will become more centered on another "story" as told interactively by a story teller. After the quiet story, our learners will then participate in a work time of their choice.

There will be more about the changes in the October and November newsletters!

In love and Peace,
Ms. Jennie

LUNCH BUNCH

There will be another hot time at the Searles Bar and Grill when the Lunch Bunch gathers there on Tuesday, Oct. 15, at 11:30 a.m. Of course this depends on the Searles restaurant being open again after a recent fire in its kitchen. If it isn't open by the 15th, Plan B (to be announced) will be activated. Hope to see you then.
